THE SCHEIBNER CENTRE

About Stretchmarks

We know just how embarrassing stretchmarks can be, and we can help. Stretchmarks are easiest to treat when they first appear in adolescence during a rapid growth spurt. At this early stage, they are just red. Later they settle and become whiter than normal skin because the skin is stretched and there are fewer pigment cells than in the normal surrounding skin.

Dr Scheibner was the first to treat stretchmarks with laser in 1991. With decades of successful treatments, the Scheibner Centre is a specialist in these unique treatments.

“I am a patient of Dr Scheibner and have been thrilled with the results of laser therapy for stretchmarks. After seeking help for this condition from many skin specialists I was continually told nothing was available.... It's like a little miracle.”

Questions and Answers about Stretchmarks:

Q: How long does the procedure take?

A: It depends on the area being treated, of course. We can give you a better idea at your consultation, but most procedures take a couple of hours. You will be instructed on aftercare procedures and how to even out the pigmentation of the stretchmarks after your treatment.

Q: Does it hurt?

A: Yes, usually. The laser has to heat the deeper dermis to trigger the healing. But pain medication is available if needed.

Q: What does it cost?

A: It varies depending on the area treated and is only quoted at a consultation. The consultation costs AUS75.00.

Q: What is the procedure?

A: First is the consultation, during which the process is explained fully and the price quoted.

Then the treatment. If pain medication is used (not everyone needs it) then you will need a lift home as you must not drive yourself. You will be given aftercare products and instructions to maximise the benefits and hasten the healing process.

The intense healing period is about two weeks, and varies depending on the area being treated.
